“Call the WCB” Ad Campaign Hitting the Airwaves Again

During the month of October, the WCB will launch the second flight of an advertising campaign to remind Manitobans to report workplace injuries to the WCB.

The ads – found on television, radio, billboards, bus shelters, doctor’s offices and online – promote the benefits of reporting injuries for workers and remind employers of the essential role prompt reporting plays in a speedy return to health and work for their employees.

New this year, the WCB has launched an interactive online tool that helps workers find out if they are eligible for WCB coverage. The tool, available at wcb.mb.ca/campaigns, helps workers identify in which industry they work and whether or not they are eligible for benefits if they’re ever hurt on the job.

Everyone has a responsibility within the workers compensation system. For more resources on how to report an injury – including web videos in seven languages – visit wcb.mb.ca/campaigns. To request free workplace posters, brochures or other information on how to report an injury, email wcb@wcb.mb.ca.
On September 1, 1916, the first WCB staff moved into the 3rd floor of the Paris Building at 259 Portage Avenue and the WCB was officially formed. There were 14 staff members in total and they were tasked with developing the structure and processes necessary to put the original Workmen’s Compensation Act (the Act) into effect.

Over the last 100 years, the WCB has kept in step with the changing times, evolving its services to offer greater support to the employers and workers of this province. Programs like Return to Work, SAFE Work Manitoba and the Appeal Commission were not part of the original Act but now play an important role in the WCB system.

“The creation of the WCB marked a historic compromise between employers and workers to protect each party if a person is hurt at work,” says Michael Werier, Chairperson of the WCB. “Today, that historic compromise still stands and the principles on which the WCB system was built still hold true.”

Workers’ compensation was the first social system in Canada. The WCB in Manitoba was formed well before Employment Insurance, the Canada Pension Plan and Medicare. Although the Act has been amended countless times since 1916, its foundation hasn’t changed.

“The WCB has remained relevant for the last 100 years even as the world around it changed and employment conditions for workers across Manitoba evolved,” says Cliff Cullen, Minister of Growth, Enterprise and Trade.

As the next century begins, the WCB is building on its strong foundation to embark on a period of change that will further ensure integrity, accountability and sustainability for the future. Through this evolution, we will continue to be a trusted partner, insuring today and building a safer tomorrow.

Honourary WCB Street Sign Commemorates Anniversary

The WCB was recognized earlier today with an honourary street sign on Broadway to commemorate its centennial. It was a fitting tribute to an organization that has influenced this city and province for 100 years.

The sign toppers are located above the Broadway street signs that surround the WCB’s head office at 333 Broadway. They serve as a visual reminder of this important milestone and of the WCB’s long history of being here to help Manitobans.
WCB Invites Manitoba Youth to #WIN100

The WCB is offering young people in Manitoba a chance to win $1,000 towards their post-secondary education and two tickets to Kanye West – all for posting a photo on social media.

It’s that easy.

The #WIN100 contest celebrates the WCB’s 100th anniversary and encourages young people aged 14-24 to think about how the WCB is “here to help” them.

We want youth to know who we are and that they’re protected if they’re ever injured at work: whether that be paying their wages while they recover, paying for healthcare such as medication or physio, or working with their employer to help them get back to work.

How to Enter
Students can upload a photo or video to Instagram, Facebook or Twitter and tell us how the WCB is here to help. If they use the hashtag #WIN100, then they’re entered to win!

Young people are less aware of the WCB and their rights at work than older workers. This contest is an opportunity to get them thinking about their rights in the workforce.
As social media becomes increasingly popular and important in day-to-day business activities, we are pleased to announce that we are now on LinkedIn!
